

Sermon Text Similarity Review

FBC Tucson / Alistair Begg 1 Thessalonians corpus

Prepared 2026-09-07 | Evidence review, not a legal or ecclesiastical verdict

Executive synthesis

8 of 9 available FBC transcripts contain at least one contiguous exact match of 8+ normalized words. The union of matched local words is 3,067 of 82,461 words (3.72%). This is an evidence signal, not a final plagiarism verdict.

Interpretation

The overlap figures are indicators of textual similarity. They should not be treated as a final plagiarism finding without reviewing attribution, licensing, Scripture quotations, oral delivery, and the longest passages in context.

Method and guardrails

- Normalize case, timestamps, caption headers, music markers, and punctuation.
- Compare each local transcript with every source transcript.
- Count exact contiguous matches of at least eight words and union matched local positions to avoid double-counting.
- Source text is Whisper ASR; local text is YouTube auto-caption text. Both can contain errors.
- Volume 3 is dated March 1, 2005; its individual recordings are older Parkside sermons.
